There is more truth than poetry in the following from the Altoona Tribune:

There is a good deal of what our old friend "Jim" Campbell used to call "poppycock" in much of the howling for the reduction of internal revenue taxes now being indulged in by certain newspapers. Most of this revenue is derived from whiskey and tobacco. Why should they not be taxed? They are harmful luxuries which no man need indulge in and which every man would be the better for not touching. When it comes to choosing between taking the duty off of blankets or whiskey we'll vote for cheap blankets every time.

A Vacant Archbishopric.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, (Dr. Tait) died on Sunday, the 3d instant, and one of the most important duties devolving upon the present ministry of Great Britain is to appoint his successor. To do this, says the Philadelphia North American, Mr. Gladstone has need to exercise his soundest judgment. It is, first, essential that the new Archbishop should be a man who will be more or less acceptable to the different parties or factions into which the Anglican church is divided. For this reason he must not be identified with any one of those parties rather than another, and so while he must of course be a man of exceptional prominence and ability, he must be without decided opinions upon questions of ecclesiastical policy and government, or if he entertains such opinions, he must have been sufficiently discreet and far-seeing to have kept them to himself. It would not do to appoint such a man as Canon Liddon, who is a recognized leader among the High Churchmen, for at such an appointment all the Low Churchmen or Evangelists would take deep offense, and the breach which has been made in the Anglican ranks already would be dangerously widened.

The nomination of a pronounced Low Churchman would be scarcely less politic, for though the evangelicals are in the majority, the High Church opponents are men of great ability and zeal, and largely represent the brains and energy of the establishment. Nor is the efficient government of the Church the only consideration which the Premier in appointing Dr. Tait's successor is required to take into account. He must also have an eye to the wishes and sentiments of the Dissenters, whose political strength is continually increasing, and upon whose support Mr. Gladstone is in a great measure dependent, and if he cannot so arrange as to give them positive pleasure in the selection to be made, he must at least take care to avoid giving them actual offence, as he would do were he to appoint a churchman who favors or is inclined to favor the tractarian view of ecclesiastical administration. The Nonconformists do not, for instance, believe in the peculiar power and authority which Anglicans, and especially High Church Anglicans, attribute to priests and bishops. They reject the doctrine of apostolic succession, and hold that there is no more spiritual virtue in a priest than in other men, and that the theory of a special grace being conferred by the laying on of hands in the ceremony of ordination is a delusive and baseless superstition. To suit them, therefore, the Archbishop must be among churchmen an evangelical of evangelicals and the lowest of the low.

Report has it that the Bishop of Durham, better known perhaps as Canon Lightfoot, is the coming man, and as this free-thinking prelate not very long ago published a book in which he undertook to demonstrate by an elaborate and learned argument that the doctrine of apostolic succession is fallacious, or that, in other words, a Dissenting minister is as much entitled to administer the sacraments as a Church of England bishop or Catholic priest, he would undoubtedly be more acceptable to the Dissenters than any one who could be chosen. It is, however, difficult to believe that Mr. Gladstone will call Dr. Lightfoot to the vacant see, not merely because he is himself sympathetic towards the High Church party, but because Dr. Lightfoot's appointment would be tantamount to a repudiation of a doctrine which is a corner-stone of the Anglican system. The chances are that the elevation of his character, the brilliancy of his talents, and especially the mildly inoffensive nature of his evangelicalism; will give the Bishop of Winchester the prize.

President Arthur's Annual Message.

The voluminous letter from the Chief Magistrate of the United States to Congress, a very brief synopsis of which appeared in these columns a few days ago, has attracted the attention and elicited the commendation or criticism of many of our contemporaries.

The President dwells at, perhaps, unnecessary length upon our foreign relations, for, except his review of the Peruvian policy of the state department, there is very little matter of interest brought under discussion. What he says as to the relations of the United States to the Chili-Peru difficulty is perhaps the most important statement in this part of the message.

On the subject of revenue reform his message is clear and decided. He reminds congress that at the last session he recommended the abolition of all internal taxes except those on tobacco and distilled and fermented liquors. He now goes a step further and suggests that "all internal taxes save those which relate to distilled spirits, can be prudently abrogated." This, if adopted, will sweep away the taxes on tobacco and fermented liquors. The recommendation of the President upon this point anticipates the work which the Democratic congress-elect proposes.

The further subjects of which the message treats are commented upon by the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin as follows: The reforms of tariff he touches with a more cautious hand. He says that the existing tariff system is, in many respects, unjust, in that it makes unequal distributions of its burdens and benefits. He is "far from advising" the abandonment of the principle of "protection to domestic labor." He recommends, however, an enlargement of the free list and the simplification of the complex and inconsistent schedule of duties upon certain manufactures, particularly those on cotton, iron and steel, and a substantial reduction of the duties upon those articles, and upon sugar, molasses, silk and woolen goods.

His recommendation that grants of money for internal improvement should be made, if made at all, by separate bills, is worthy of full consideration. The loading of the river and harbor bills with items of unnecessary expenditure is an abuse which calls for a remedy, and the suggestion of the President seems to be a practical one, though even this, of course, would not entirely cure it. Members might bargain to support each other's bills as readily as to support each other's items to the same bill. Still, the abuse would be curbed in some degree.

His policy as to reviving American ship building and "restoring the United States flag in the ocean carrying trade" is not clearly stated. He does not in terms recommend subsidies, but admits the disadvantages under which we labor, and says that "these obstacles should in some way be overcome." These obstacles are the greater cost of building ships, the greater cost of selling them, higher taxes and greater interest on capital. How these are to be overcome, except by subsidies, his message does not indicate.

The President takes a decided stand in favor of the reduction of letter postage. He recommends that it be reduced to two cents per half ounce. He says: "I have given much study and reflection to this subject, and am thoroughly persuaded that such a reduction would be for the best interests of the public." The fact that in this department there is a considerable surplus, and a probability that the receipts will increase in a greater ratio than the expenditures, makes the time favorable for this important lightening of the postal charges.

The message also recommends an amendment to the constitution which would authorize a President to veto any item or parts of a bill, while approving of the rest, and he names where the fundamental law gives to the executive this power. This, if adopted, would limit the abuse of putting "riders" upon necessary bills. The message, as a whole, is an able and business-like paper, and indicates a readiness on the part of the Executive to bring the policy of the administration into harmony with the economic wishes of the people.

About the Message.

The speech of Queen Victoria to her parliament is usually about half a column in length. Why, then, should the message of a President of the United States be nine columns. Is it the usual Yankee garrulousness? Presidents' messages pruned down to about two and a half or three columns would be more interesting reading.—Watchman.

The opinion of the Harrisburg Patriot is that the message of President Arthur, sent to congress on Monday last, is a plain business-like document, in its statement of facts, but rather timid and evasive in its discussion of the grave questions of taxation and finance which are pressing upon the government for settlement.—Watchman.

The above paragraphs sufficiently answer one another. Queen Victoria's speeches to her parliament are uniformly brief, but they are correspondingly unsatisfactory. They not only fail to give a full and comprehensive statement of facts, but they are also said to be extremely evasive. If they were as long as the President's message is would be more difficult to make them evade discussions of "questions of taxation and finance" or any other subjects of importance.

Although long, the President's message usually contains allusions to the reports of the heads of the different departments and sometimes a statement of their more important contents, thus saving to the inquiring reader whose time is limited much labor and research.

Newspapers in Schools.

We agree with the Altoona Tribune when it says: "We hold that there is no single newspaper printed in the world—aside from a handful of a purely literary character, and they are not newspapers—which is adapted for use in our public schools and which could be safely substituted for the text books. It is the business of a newspaper to print all the news, and whilst its editor should strive to suppress everything of an immoral character, yet he must print the occurrences of the day whatever they may be. He dare not suppress items of intelligence which are distasteful to him and so he must give space to the crimes of the world as well as the good deeds. He does not make these things, he merely, records them. And if he wants to print a paper which the people will read he must reject intelligence of nothing that has actually occurred."

According to the Boston Journal, this was the way in which the President had his message put in print and yet kept from the public until the proper time. About two weeks ago he sent for Mr. Rounds, Public Printer, and gave him part of the MS., enjoining upon him the utmost secrecy. Mr. Rounds set up the matter himself, assisted by Captain Brian, foreman, and Mr. Taylor, chief clerk. The rest of the MS. when ready, was given by Mr. Rounds in very short "takes" to a few trusty compositors. Mr. Rounds read the proofs himself, and made the corrections, and kept all the MS., proofs and galleys, when not in use, locked up in a burglar-proof safe. As a result, not a line leaked out, and even the "guessers" were so far baffled that when Mr. Rounds was visiting the President to carry proofs and get copy, they imagined that the President was going to remove him and had sent for him to tell him so, and they made a serious announcement to that effect.

The United States supreme court has affirmed the ruling of a lower court that Arlington, the former home of General Lee, belongs to his heirs. This decision will not affect the national cemetery upon the estate, as the heirs of Lee have no disposition to disturb the dead, but desire to sell the property to the government.

The next transit of Venus will occur in the year 2004.

Our National Park.

Visitors to the Yellowstone park are soon to have the advantage (if such it be) of a first-class hotel or two, instead of being obliged to rough it, as heretofore, by camping out and finding themselves. The interior department has made a contract with two Dakota capitalists, granting them the use of tracts of land in the park, to build hotels thereon of such design and dimensions, and at such points as may be approved by the department, and to run such lines of stages within the park as the travel may render necessary; and to construct lines of telegraph from the principal points in the park to connect with the through lines constructed near it. It is provided that no greater charges shall be made for accommodations furnished and services rendered than those set forth in a schedule to be approved by the secretary of the interior.

A few good hotels in the National Park or its vicinity might perhaps be well enough if kept under control and made to serve the public and not the owners only, but other privileges have been granted in the park of a very objectionable character. According to General Sheridan the park is rented out to private parties for money-making purposes, and that as many as 4000 elk have been killed by skin hunters in the park since its discovery; that during last winter alone as many as 2000 were slaughtered, besides mountain sheep, deer and other animals. General Sheridan recommends that the park be extended in an easterly direction, about forty miles, so as to add 3344 square miles and make a preserve for the large game of the West now so rapidly decreasing, and that the improvements in the park be national and controlled by the Government, that a small appropriation be made and expended each year on roads and trails, and that the park be policed by a small body of troops to keep out the skin and other hunters and make the park a safe resort for the game now drifting towards it. These are timely suggestions which Congress should heed and the hotel and other privileges granted by the Government should be kept subordinate to the general purpose of making the park a truly national institution to be preserved as nearly as possible in all its natural glory for all time.—Phil'a Press.

If the scandalous stories about the power wielded over Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, by Mike McDonald, a notorious gambler of that city, are true, Chicago is probably entitled to rank as the wickedest city in the United States. It is alleged that McDonald has control at the city hall to an extent which enables him to secure immunity for any den, however notorious, and that his charge for protection ranges from 20 to 40 per cent. of the receipts of the gambling houses which enjoy it. The newspapers give names and street numbers of men who keep gambling resorts, but it is complained that the authorities do not heed the demands for their arrest, and a female fiend who is proprietor of a gambling den has openly boasted that she has influence at the city hall to crush her enemies. The marvelous prosperity of Chicago certainly cannot long continue if an effective effort is not made to expel the moral putridity implied by the truth of the allegations concerning Mayor Harrison and gambling.

On Wednesday, the 6th, the house of representatives passed a bill awarding $35,000 to the state of Georgia for money alleged to have been spent in the defense of the Union in 1777. This is about the oldest claim on record. It is to be hoped that the state isn't holding back a demand for 105 years' interest on the money. In that event the general government might be justified in putting in as a counter claim, a bill for expenses incurred in preventing Georgia from destroying the Union she had helped to make.

St. Peter's Episcopal church is described as having changed less in 120 years than anything else in Philadelphia, and is therefore necessarily very old fashioned. The high pulpit with its sounding board and the pews with their backs reaching to the sitters' necks remain exactly as they were in 1762. The congregation could afford to modernize the edifice, but take a pride in keeping it as it is.

The contest was like a foot-ball match or a student's rush, and was witnessed by an amused crowd.

Poetry.

A NIGHT IN THE RED SEA.

The strong hot breath of the land is lashing
The wild sea horses, they rear and race;
The plunging bows of our ship are dashing
Full in the fiery south wind's face.

She rends the water, it foams and follows,
And the silvery jet of the towering spray,
And the phosphor sparks in the deep wave hollows,
Lighten the line of our midnight way.

The moon above with a full orb'd luster,
Lifting the veil of the slumbering land,
Gleams o'er a desolate island cluster,
And the breakers white on the lonely san .

And a bare hill-range in the distance frowning
Dim wrapt in haze like a shrouded ghost,
With its jagged peaks the horizon crowning,
Broods o'er the stark Arabian coast.

See, on the edge of the waters leaping,
The lamp, far-flashing, of Perim's Strait
Glitters and grows, as the ship goes sweeping
Fast on its course for the Exile's gate.

And onward still on the broadening ocean
Out of the narrow and perilous seas,
Till we rock with a large and listless motion
In the moist soft air of the Indian breeze.

And the Southern Cross, like a standard flying,
Hangs in the front of the tropic night,
But the great bear sinks like a hero dying,
And the Pole-star lowers its signal light.

And the round earth rushes toward the morning,
And the waves grow paler and wan the foam;
Misty and dim, with a glance of warning,
Vanish the stars of my Northern home.

Let the wide waste sea for a space divide me
Till the close-coil'd circles of time unfold—
Till the stars rise westward to greet and guide me
When the exile ends, and the years told.

THE FARMER'S THANKSGIVING.

BY DORA READ GOODDALE.

The harvest fields are stripped of grain;
The late-sown corn is shocked in dun,
And husked beneath a chilly sun;
The ragged stubble checks the plain.

The hills are desolate and cold,
The maples stand in grim array,
And through the forests muffled gray
The winds of heaven strike the world.

Yet while the harvest splendors fall,
The grain is sold, the barter made,
And work, and care of crop or trade
Are put aside with plow and flail.

The bins are filled, the barns are stored,
The orchards robbed of scanty fruit,
And in the garret cold and mute,
The thrifty squirrels share the hoard.

Although the drought was long and sore,
And scorched the field beside the road
Till half the crop was left unhoed,
Nor aftermarth repaid the mower;

Though half the rye was winter-killed,
And here the wheat was struck by blight,
Yet all is good in Heaven's sight,
And still the waiting barns are filled.

And still through every empty mood
Beyond the moment's harsh surprise,
At least a truer knowledge lies—
The sense of some essential good.

So, since the harvest moon has waned,
By yonder shining crescent's edge,
Our hands are struck upon a pledge,
And much is lost—and more is gained!

The Pilgrim's seed has taken root,
Despite the land so hard and gray,
And flowered to this Thanksgiving Day
Shall yet bring forth abundant fruit.

Our Story Teller.

Engine No. 1.

"Did you ever ride in the 'cab' of a locomotive?"

A reporter, you know, never allows a chance to slip wherein information is to be fairly gained.

When burly-framed and large-hearted Buck Smith, engineer of No. 1, offered me a ride in his "cab," you may depend—to use a slang phrase—"I was there."

Smith was a popular fellow. But his extreme quietness of disposition was remarked by every one, and there was an ever present, unmistakable expression of sadness in his handsome eyes, withal his glance was keen as an eagle's when on the run "looking out ahead." He was running the St. Louis night express that backs into Washington before heading westward. I was going as far as the Capital

I clambered, slily and unseen, into the "cab," and was instantly alert for everything, though careful to keep myself out of the way.

Promptly at 7:30 the gong sounded. There was a hissing of steam, a continuous, doleful clanging of the bell, puff! puff! and out of the glare of C—— station we glided into darkness—darkness pitchy and wet with falling snow.

Grim, stern, rigid as a statue stood Buck. I fell to wondering whether an engineer's arm never grew tired, when I knew that his trusty hand did not dare once to be removed from that small lever in a route of hundreds of miles, while scores of human beings slept tranquilly in the cars behind him—slept, and few indeed had thought to offer a prayer for the brave, resolute man on whose nerve their very lives depended.

To my surprise, with the increase of speed, there seemed to be less noise in the "cab." And it was just as I began to realize this, that the incident occurred which I now relate to you.

We had just passed Winans. I knew there was no road to signal for, but Buck suddenly exclaimed:

"Blow, Harry!"

The fireman pulled the cord, and out on the night shrieked a peculiar whistle, unlike any I ever heard.

At the same time, Harry, the young fireman, glanced at me strangely, and shook his head. I looked instinctively toward Buck Smith, and what I saw made my reporter's heart jump. There was a mystery in the cab of engine No. 1.

The firm hand was still tight on the lever, the stern, sad eyes still fixed unswervingly ahead; but I saw on one cheek a single, shining, rolling tear.

He was bending forward slightly. His rough shirt was open at the front, where, suspended by a leather string, were two rings—one a plain gold band, the other set with a beautiful, gleaming diamond. These rings were pressed kissingly to his lips.

"Buck's a-prayin'?" said the fireman close to my ear.

Then said Buck, as he carefully hid away the rings:

"Hear that toot, Nat?"

"Yes."

"Guess what it's for?"

"How should I know?"

"For my little girl."

"Why, I didn't know you had a child, Buck."

"Well, the whole world doesn't know it—that's a fact. Coal up, Harry; here's the grade.

The iron door was wrenched open, like the fiery, seething mouth of a monster dragon, while the fireman plied his shovel.

All had transpired in less than 10 seconds. As the glare lighted broadly on the dark night, I saw, on the bank of the trackside—saw, as we sped like the wind—a female figure who waved a lantern briskly to and fro.

"God bless her, Nat—that's my Dolly." Then, presently, "I don't know but I may as well tell you about it—though I don't tell everybody, mind you. I've only had my home here a few years—used to live near Point o' Rocks. As pretty a cottage it was, for as pretty a wife, as any need wish for. You haven't known me long, or you'd have heard that I married a girl who expected to inherit hondsomely. But I like you, Nat. No matter how the match came about. She was a very delicate and beautiful prize for a rough fellow like I am. I won her away from a chap who was better off, better-looking than I. His name was Carrol Conrad. I was never a jealous man. I did not even request my wife to give up his acquaintance. So I thought nothing of it when sometimes, when I returned from a trip, she would say:

"Buck, dear, Carrol has been here to see me."

"But one night, Nat, there came a blow that well nigh drove me mad—wait a minute. Blow for the Relay, Harry."

Thrice, four times, shrieked the prompt whistle, and presently the train came to a halt. Not for long. There was a bang on the little gong over my head that startled me.

Again we steamed onward. No more stopping until we reached Washington, and no more interruptions, except the signal blows for curves and roads. I was almost breathlessly still, watching Buck, who, it seemed to me, had not moved a muscle nor turned an eye from his "lookout" since he kissed the talismanic ring.

"I found the cottage darkened," he resumed, abruptly, after we had rumbled across the viaduct. "There was no light to welcome me, unlike it had always been, and—and Nat, my wife, was gone. I found on the parlor table a note that first set my blood on fire, then turned my heart to stone. As near as I can remember, it was something like this:

"Buck, dear, forgive me! My life has been so lonely since marrying you, and the temptation so great, that I have consented to go with Carrol. I am not all wicked; I couldn't help it; forgive me."

"I thought it all over as in a dream Nat. Poor little thing! she didn't see much of me for love making, that's a fact. Then some sort of a demon caused me to write on the back of the note a horrible curse upon the pair, and I pinned it to the table top with my penknife.

"Turning round, I found little Dolly standing in the doorway crying. She had been looking everywhere in vain for mamma. At least this treasure was left to me. Ah, Nat, it was this precious charge that saved me from going straight to the dogs."

"I closed the cottage, resigned from my engine, and brought Dolly off to live. I'd saved a little sum. A year went by. Then came another eventful night—a night as sad to me as ever human being knew. The wind howled a gale; the snow was deep, and piling fast. Dolly came running to me, crying loudly:

"Papa—oh, papa—there's somebody lying on the track. It's a woman, I can't pull her off; and the St. Louis express is coming."

"Nat, I reached the track, I think, at two big leaps. In another moment I had grasped up a female, who was half-buried in the snow; and just in time, for this same engine—No. 1—went whizzing past. When I laid her on the lounge, I—Nat, it was my little, lost wife! What a coming back! Oh, how different she looked! I saw death in her delicate face and form—always delicate, as I said before. She opened her eyes and called out in a voice that seems to dwell in my ears now:

"Buck—oh, Buck, dear! is it you at last?"

"Then, as I stood dumb and trembling, she told me her pitiful story. Carrol Conrad had come to her with a letter from her father, who was in New York, saying that he was dying and wanted her by his side. Little Dolly was at a friend's house, three miles back in the country. No time could be lost. She went with Conrad. Not until they were beyond Philadelphia did she learn, from his own lips, the dastardly ruse.

"The letter was a forgery. The hasty note of explanation she had left for me was adroitly exchanged for the one I found—another base forgery. She was now blasted in my sight, he told her. Soon her name would be bandied in slanderous gossip. Had she not better go with him, and let his devotion repay for the trick? She spurned the wretch, and called on the train conductor to protect her, continuing her way to New York.

"Here she found her father truly dead. He had ruptured an artery in excitement over a speculation failure that cost him every dollar of his fortune. She was then without kindred, without money, and her few early friends scattered and lost. She managed to make her way back but no one could tell her where I was. She found Conrad's forgery, with my bitter curse on the back of it. It must have driven her insane.

"God meant that I should know these truths before she died. In her wandering search for me, she had come almost to my very door under the St. Louis night express. Consumption did its work soon added to that night's exposure. I laid her in her grave, Nat, and my heart with her.

"That was five years ago. I went back on the road and got engine No. 1. Dolly is a big girl now. And every time I run this train out, you'll find her by the track with a lantern—rain, snow or starlight, Nat—waiting to hear me blow, and to see that there's nobody on the rails. And she dips the lantern, for a kiss, you know.

"Engineers, like sailors, have some little superstition; and sometimes, when I pass the spot where I snatched my unhappy wife from a horrible death, I feel a shudder go through me, as if I'd actually struck somebody with the catcher."

Not another word from Buck the remainder of the ride. At the Washington depot we parted with a hearty good-by.

A few years later, quite by accident, while at C—— Station on reportorial business, I heard that good old Buck was dead. His daughter Dolly, had married, and was living snugly among the green hills of Anacostia, D. C.

A Man of Silver.

Foley Abbott, of Sawtooth, went on to the high and rugged peak opposite the Pilgrim mine, on Beaver gulch, to kill some grouse. The trip was a hard one, as the mountain is very steep, and he was obliged to take many "tacks" to reach the summit. While passing near one of the high granite cliffs he noticed that there was an opening under it, and thought he had found a good place to rest and be protected from the wind, so he proceeded to it. Seeing that darkness was inside and the cave appearing to be of good size, he made a torch of slivers taken from a pitch pine log near by, and proceeded to explore his new find. After going through a long, narrow and crooked passage he found himself inside a large chamber with smooth floor and perfectly dry, which was brilliantly lighted by a flame in the centre. As this was the main attraction, he cautiously went to it. To his amazement he found an image of a man, made of what had the appearance of silver, and which he thinks it is. At the head was a helmet of a peculiar pattern, in which were three imitation feathers made in gold and silver. From the mouth of the strange image proceeded the flame. Mr. Abbott thinks that the prehistoric and undoubtedly very intelligent race that erected it had discovered a gas jet, and that there is communication down through the body to the solid rock, from which the gas proceeds perpetually. It is an evidence that there is an immense body of coal oil under the mountain from which the gas proceeds. After satisfying his curiosity looking at the wonderful lamp, he tremblingly commenced a search for other objects.

On the walls were hieroglyphics, which of course he could not read. In one corner was a very large human skeleton—at least nine feet high, and by it a stone tomahawk and a large cross-bow, which although it had the appearance of being perfectly sound, fell into a thousand pieces when he attempted to lift it. A stone mortar containing some very rich gold specimens was found, and also some large pieces of ruby silver.

A Mouse in a Girl's Hat.

A young lady of Chelsea, who had been shopping in Boston, visited the office of a prominent physician on Saturday. She was flushed and excited and said she had a very strange sensation which led her to apprehend some serious brain trouble—in short, insanity. The peculiar sensation she described was a feeling running round in a circle on the top of her head. The doctor took off her hat and examined her head, but found nothing and she remarked that the sensation had left her. She put on her hat and after sitting a few moments, jumped up with a scream, saying that it had come again. Another examination followed, first of the head, then of the hat, and in the hat a small but active mouse was discovered. If we can only convey the impression to all ladies who wear large hats to the theatre that they are liable to be infested with mice, we shall have earned the thanks of thousands. The little story is true.

"Is it a fact," asked one Austin young lady of another Austin young lady, "that you have consented to marry young Spooney, and are going to be married right off?" "Yes, we are engaged." "Why, he has not got any money, he is ugly, and he is dying with consumption. He won't live two months." "That's the very reason I marry him. Black is so becoming to me that I ought to have been a widow years and years ago."

An old colored aunty in Detroit, looking on the auroral display, perdicted as follows: "I tell yo,' chile, we done hab de same speriment down in Owensb'ro, Kaintuck, in '70, an' we had de fust snow we eber saw; an' we had skatin' on Christmas too. I tell yo,' we'll shiver dis winter."

NOTES BY A RAMBLER.

A "Correspondent" Makes a trip through Sunbury, Northumberland and Milton and Writes a Spicy Letter.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 29, 1882.

Having to make a trip to Sunbury the past week, I arrived there at 1.15 a. m., Friday, November 24; found a most excellent hotel, "Central;" had a very nice bed room (heated by steam) Everything about the hotel is well conducted; table well supplied, food well cooked and served.

The first person I encountered in the morning that I knew any thing of was Mr. Will Forster (son of Capt. Robert Forster, who was killed at Gettysburg). He, in connection with his uncle, Judge Whitmer, has a large general store on northwest corner of the Diamond. He is a pleasant, agreeable young man; was very polite and useful to me while there. He was raised in Centre county, knows many and is well known here in Bellefonte. The citizens of the town are considerably agitated over the finding of a "lead mine," (said to be of fabulous size and richness), about two miles east of Sunbury. I did not see the mine or vein, but I saw plenty of the ore, and as far as I can judge it does look very rich. A donation of $50,000 taken in the way of stock is asked of citizens, that the company may erect a "smelter or smelters" in the place, and if it is not given or taken, away goes the ore some where else to be smelted—at least, that is the way I was told in regard to the matter. The company having and operating the mine, are from the state of "Ben Butler," and from Pottsville, this State. Another excitement that was about dying out was the killing of one man by another on Wednesday night, 22d inst, by stabbing him in the neck with a large knife, during a quarrel. The murderer was captured and brought back from Williamsport Thursday night, had a hearing before Cap't A. N. Brice, J. P., who committed him to jail to await his trial at the next court. The victim died in less than one hour. They were both employed on the new R. R. (now building on south side of the river,) passing through Lewisburg and connecting with the Reading R. R. in West Milton.

Six railroads either centre, meet or cross at Sunbury. The new "North and West Branch" R. R, from Sunbury to Wilkesbarre was opened to travel on Thursday, 23d inst. About four hundred persons participated in the opening exercises and a banquet at the Wyoming Valley House, Wilkesbarre. Quite a saving of time will be gained going to and from Wilkesbarre on this railroad.

The citizens of Sunbury are very much exercised (and justly, too,) now in regard to getting the P. & E. R. R. Company to run the R. R. tracks around the city to the station, instead of through the main street as they now do. Sometimes they block up the way with their freight and other trains. Numbers of persons, many of them ladies, have to wait sometimes for an hour to get from one side of the main street of the town to the other. The business of the road is so very great they can not keep the track clear. There is a very good and partly graded way to get around the city and should be put into practical effect, and relieve the people of the cars running through and standing in the main part of the town. It is dangerous and disagreeable.

The oil pipe line men of one of the lines are busy bringing their pipes across the river, and on down through Northumberland, Dauphin and thence to terminate near or in Philadelphia. The county buildings of Sunbury are very fine ones, especially the jail, which is a magnificent stone structure.

I met and had a very pleasant time with Capt. C. I. Bruner, Internal Revenue Collector for this district (to whom I had a letter from Hon. J. B. Linn), and Capt. A. N. Brice, who is editor and owner of the very best Republican paper (weekly) in the State, the "News," He is also a lawyer and a J. P. and engaged in almost everything of progress in the town, and Mr. F. Mann, the gentlemanly and pleasant freight agent of one of the numerous freight depots in the place. I found in him an old schoolmate of a brother of mine, (now deceased), and found also he entertained fond recollections of their old school days when gay and happy boys together. I met a Mr. Moore, who keeps a dry goods store; a large fine looking lawyer named Sober; Jared C. Irwin, formerly of our old army band led by Tom. Grant (now dead), and also two others from our old band. I had an exceedingly pleasant time with all these men.

Sunbury has standing on the public square, the most beautiful, chaste, and appropriate soldiers' monument I ever saw. It is surrounded by a railing of iron; the same railing encloses a park. The base is quite large and very handsome, and at either corner and some feet distant and at the foot of the mound are old black cannon used in the late war. At the top of the base, and just where the shaft begins, are imitation cannon (cut out of the material of which the monument is made). The base has inscribed on its several sides various interesting things. I am sorry I did not make a note of them so as to state them correctly. On one side I know is the age, death and service of Col. James Cameron, who was killed at "Bull Run, and another has "Erected to the memory of Northumberland county soldiers and sailors." The column has four even sides tapering to the top, on which stands on a pedestal, the statue of Col. James Cameron. He stands facing the north, both hands on the hilt of his sword and the swordpoints on the ground at his feet, as though at a parade rest. He has on a military over-coat and hat, and those who knew him say it is a most excellent likeness. I did not learn the height, but think from bottom of base to top of statue must be sixty feet. On the side or face of the column are raised places running clear around. They are about four inches wide and have cut on them the names of the different battles in which the honored heroes of Northumberland county were engaged. Wilderness, Petersburg, Gettysburg, Williamsburg, Antietam and many others are inscribed thereon. Our honored citizen, Gen. James A. Beaver, delivered a most eloquent and fitting oration at the unveiling of the monument, I think in 1879, possibly 1878.

I went over to Northumberland on the p. m. train and walked back via. of the wagon road late in the evening. I found N. very much behind S. in the way of improvements either in building or business. It is hard to tell which is the older, Northumberland or the "Blue Hill" just opposite; but I found all the men with whom I came in contact good, genial, pleasant gentlemen. I called on Mr. A. W. Starck. He has a handsome store and does a fine business. Also met the proprietor of the "Vankirk" House, Mr. Koch; and last, but not least, called on Col. David Taggart (known to many in Centre Co.) to renew an old acquaintance of many years ago and to learn of his brothers, John and Frank, old school mates of mine (John, poor fellow, died in St. Louis some years ago). The Colonel received me cordially (as he does all his visitors) and after conversing on various matters for some time took me out on his premisis to show me his herd of beautiful animals, full blooded Jersey cows, and heifers, (six cows, I think, and one heifer). He is very proud of them and well he may be; they are beauties and no mistake. They are all of a color and not one white hair on the whole herd. He showed me also the cream and butter from them. It looked too good to eat. He has a splendid system of feeding that helps to make his animals of various kinds as they are. He feeds no whole grain at all and has all the different kinds of grain ground very fine and kept entirely separate. He has some fat hogs, the finest I ever saw, two that will each weigh over six hundred pounds of clean meat. They are not so very fat, both large framed and perfect beauties in their way. The Colonel's large celery, put away for the winter, and his immense, choice strawberry plants, covered up for cold weather, are in keeping with his other fine tastes. His rooms are worth seeing, being covered with pictures, relics and curiosities of his extensive travels to Alaska and other countries; a very large modern library, beside more than two hundred volumes of the library of Mason, the hermit of "Blue Hill" (not one of the books published in the present century), adorn his book case and tables. His Chinese and Japanese pictures of real persons he has met, are beautiful and curious. A full description of all he has about him would more than fill my paper even were I able to give such a description. The Colonel and ex-Gov. Curtin were admiring school mates in their boyhood days at Milton, and he is a very warm personal friend of the Governor. Col. Taggart is a man of magnificent presence and fine address, well versed in almost everything, fond of his home and comforts, with no political aspirations, but should some day in the near future be governor of this great state of Pennsylvania.

Leaving Sunbury in the early morning train, came to Milton. Every one has heard of the great fire in Milton a few years ago, one May day, but any person would be surprised to see the Milton of to day. How she has raised from her ashes and grown in size and beauty. Magnificent houses have taken the place of those of older style burned; most beautiful churches, especially the Methodist church completed, and the Presbyterian almost finished; the schools, the public houses, the stores the beautiful and convenient station house of the P. & E. R. R. al attest the business enterprise of her inhabitants and the great an increasing prosperity of the place. There are some vacant places to be built yet, but in time all will be filled. There is some insurance money still due on some of the burned buildings not rebuilt and possibly some on those already replaced. The Milton Iron Company (some of the stock owned in Centre Co.) with such men as Gen. Manager John Jenkins, well known in Centre Co. and other places as a No. 1 iron manufacturer; Peter Johnston, book keeper, also a Centre Co. man; A. Schreyer (an old and valued friend of the writer), as President, make an iron Co. second to none in the country. They are still enlarging their works and the same company now own the rolling mill and forge at Williamsport, and are building a large addition to it in the shape of nail works.

There is also in Milton very large car works, and very large nail works. Two or three railroads either centre or cross there. It is destined to be a very large business place, even more than it now is. I met in Milton many old friends and acquantances, and many new ones. The short time I was there on this trip was spent very pleasantly indeed. Mr. W. Lesher, formerly of this county, lives near there. He was manager for Mr. Kaufman at the Hoy ore mines. Will B. Chamberlin, (brother-in-law of A. O. Furst, Esq.,) well known to many in this county, lives in a beautiful new residence, the old one totally destroyed together with everything in it, his family barely escaping. Will is largely engaged in the manufacture of lumber in Northumberland.

The G. A. R. organization is flourishing in Milton. Post No. 129 has a large membership and is increasing rapidly. I first met Mr. Cadwalader, the Quartermaster, an exceedingly pleasant gentleman, who kindly took me to the store of the Commander, Batdorf. I found in him one whom I had met at G. A. R. reunions. He took me to the Post room, which is tastefully fitted up and nicely arranged. Then we called on the Past Post Commander Parker, proprietor of the "Riverside Hotel." He had a peculiar "buzzard" dollar that is now exceedingly rare, commanding four dollars each. The eagle on his dollar having eight feathers in the tail, all others of the same stamp have only seven. I do not know what year it was coined. I forgot to look. Met Comrade Caldwell of the National Bank, a live G. A. R. man; also Comrades Logan and Strine, editors and proprietors of the Miltonian. Logan was a 51st Pa. man, and therefore served in the same old Army Corps with the writer. He has been appointed postmaster. They edit and control a good paper. Met another G. A. R. man, John G. Kurtz, well known in Centre county. He showed me his ingenius fire escape and it is quite an invention, and no doubt for the purpose will take the place of all others in use. He has several more inventions, and starts west in a few weeks to push them forward in that great part of our country. May success attend him. The clerk of the Riverside House, Hopkins, is the captain of the Milton camp of "Sons of Veterans," and he is also inspector on the staff of the Colonel of the "Sons" in the State. He is a fine young man. They have a very flourishing "camp" in Milton. Hope to see a "camp" mustered in Centre county before the winter is over.

The G. A. R. cause is represented in Northumberland County, in five places, all having good working Posts, Milton, Watsontown, Georgestown, and Shamokin. Sunbury with more than two hundred ex-soldiers, has no Post, but before the year closes I feel sure that she, too, will find a place in the "Roster" with name and number.

After being nicely entertained at the home of Mr. Schreyer I left on p. m. train for home, well pleased with my trip, and have recorded some of the incidents and named some whom I met in this hastily written letter, hoping I may interest others.

The "Widow" Butler.

The reason why General Butler, governor-elect of Massachusetts, was nick-named "The Widow" may not be generally known. For the information of those not in possession of the reason, we publish the following extract from a speech the General made at Lawrence in 1876, one expression in which gave rise to the expressive nickname by which he has ever since been designated by his political opponents:

"Then there is the Hamburg massacre; what was that? It was the beginning of a political campaign by the men of the south. You Democrats of the north, who perhaps fought with me don't believe that. Where was that affair? In South Carolina. And what is South Carolina? A state where there is at least 40,000 Republican majority, and if the majority rules they say the state is ruled by negroes. Well why shouldn't it be if they are in the majority? you believe in majority rule don't you, my Democratic friends? A short time since a cow was killed at Wilkinson, Miss., and what was the result of it? Why twenty-nine negroes were killed: Do you suppose the killing of the cow was the reason? No, it was the beginning of a political campaign. * * * I want to go to congress again. I have no hesitation in saying so. I am no maiden. I am more like a widow. I know what I want. I am not afraid to ask for it. I think it time somebody should be in congress who knows when and where and how to speak of these southern outrages."

POETRY AND FACT.—In Keat's beautiful poem, "Lamia," a young man has been led captive by a phantom girl, and is made the slave of her beauty, until an old teacher comes in and fixes his eye upon the figure, and it vanishes in its true form of a slimy serpent. This is poetry; now for fact. Disease in various forms siezes upon young men and old, and especially does it affect the kidneys and liver, and begin insidiously to work ruin and death. But Hunt's Remedy, as the old teacher, comes in, and the slimy serpent of disease crawls away. At first men think that a diseased liver or disordered kidneys is a mere phantom, and go on their way neglecting the evil, and not realizing their danger. But this is not something to be trifled with. Call in Hunt's Remedy at once; it will both reveal the demon, and cast it out. For kidney, liver, and urinary complaints there is nothing like it.

I have no objeckshun to a man parting his hair in the middle, but I shall alwuzz insist upon his finishing up the job bi wearing a short gown and pettikoat.—Josh Billings.

It was written: "Good for nervousness is a characteristic of celery;" but the intelligent compositor rendered it, "Good-for-nothingness is a characteristic of the clergy."

THE GREAT LONE LAND.

I wandered alone and afar
On the plains of the north, and my eye
Was caught by the blaze of a star
That shot through the pitiless sky.

The coldness of death was below,
The stillness of death in the air,
Save that over the wild waste of snow,
The wolf pour'd his howl of despair.

And stricken and weary I trod,
Scarce daring to gaze into space,
Till the pitiful mercy of God,
Came falling in tears on my face.

But the meteor had passed and was gone!
Ah, whither? in vain shall I seek?
I stand in the dread night alone,
And the voice of my soul strives to speak;

But it falters, and falls back unspoken,
And dies like the wolf howl afar,
The God-lights of life are all broken,
And I am a wreck like the star!

A December Gale.

LONDON, December 7.—Telegrams from various parts of the United Kingdom report a snow storm of unusual severity. Traffic on the railways in many districts has been almost suspended. A train was snowed up all night at Cheshire and the passengers, numbering twelve, suffered acutely. Telegraphic communication between London and Glasgow is totally interrupted. Elsewhere messages are greatly delayed. Many wrecks around the coast are reported. At Oldham and neighboring parts of Lancashire county the storm has not been equalled in thirty years. Heavy loss has been caused in many places.

CHICAGO, December 7.—It was extremely cold last night and to-day, the wave extending over the whole northwest, and the thermometer ranging last night at from zero to 15 degrees below, the latter at Sioux Falls, Dakota, and this morning at from 12 degrees above to 14 degrees below, the latter at Peoria. Here it was 8 degrees below. At an early hour the weather generally is bright, the snow-fall being only 2 to 4 inches deep. It was a terrible night on the lake, and several crafts were unable to make the harbor and were frozen up, the harbor being iced over this morning.

Ball Tossers in Council.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., December 7.—The National league professional base ball club awarded the championship of 1882 to Chicago. The appeal from the action of the Cleveland club suspending Doscher was dismissed. N. E. Young was re-elected secretary. The Worchester and Troy clubs resigned and were made honorary members. A minute was made of the death of President Hulbert. The schedule series was changed from twelve to fourteen games. The playing rules were amended so that the pitcher's hand in delivering the ball must pass below the shoulder instead of the waist. Provisions were made for the appointment of four league umpires at an annual salary of $1,000 each and rules for their government were adopted. The ten players whose names were on the black list: Mouck, Pike, Dorgan, Nolan, Gross, Fox, Dickenson, Crowley, Brown and Caskins were reinstated to full membership.

Medical.

Disease is an effect, not a cause. Its origin is within; its manifestations are without. Hence, to cure the disease the Cause must be removed, and in no other way can a cure be effected. WARNER'S SAFE KIDNEY AND LIVER CURE is established on just principles. It realizes that of all diseases arise from deranged kidneys and liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.

For the innumerable troubles caused by unhealthy Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs; for the distressing Disorders of Women; for Malaria, and for physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of imposters, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN' IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

A Fatal Collision.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 8.—A Hinton, W. Va., special says: A collision occurred at 3.30 yesterday afternoon between a freight train going west and an express passenger train going east, at the west entrance of Stretcher's Neck tunnel, twenty-two miles west of here. Three persons were instantly killed and five others injured, and two engines, two passenger cars, one baggage car and five freight cars wrecked. The killed were Henry Ancarrow, of Hinton, engineer of the freight; Patrick Goheen, of Hinton, fireman of the same; William Copper, of Fayetteville, W. Va., fireman of the passenger train. The injured are B. B. Thompson, of Huntingdon, W. Va., conductor of the passenger train, back and legs broken; John Madden, of Huntington, engineer of the passenger train, leg broken and other injuries, will probably recover; the conductor of the Cincinnati sleeping car, of Boston, name unknown, both legs broken, probably fatal; a newsboy, name unknown, badly cut; Stephen Cole, colored porter, Louisa Court House, seriously burned. The passengers, numbering seventy-five, among whom were Senators Williams, of Kentucky, and Robert Bonner, of New York, escaped uninjured. The accident was caused by a misunderstanding of the orders by the freight men, whereby they were attempting to take an hour more than had been allowed them of the passenger train's time, it being late.

Utah's Delegate-Elect.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The House committee on elections will probably take the initial steps to-morrow to determine whether Mr. Caine, the new delegate-elect from Utah Territory, is entitled to a seat as the successor of Delegate Cannon, who was ousted by a vote of the House last session. The main question at issue is whether the Utah commission did not exceed its authority in holding an election for delegate. The opponents of Mr. Caine claim that a delegate is a United States officer and not a Territorial officer, and that the commission was not authorized to hold any election, except for Territorial officers. The weight of opinion seems to be in favor of Mr. Caine, on the ground that a Territorial delegate bears the same relation to the Territory that a congressman does to the State that he represents, and that they are officers of the Territories or States that elect them.

Fire at Meadville.

MEADVILLE, Pa., December 8.—Our citizens were called together this morning by an alarm of fire. Culver hall, belonging to Allegheny college, was discovered in flames, and owing to the lack of facilities to extinguish the fire the building was in a short time wholly consumed. The intense cold operated against the efforts made to save a portion of the building. All worked hard to save the hall, until it became evident that further efforts were useless. Sixty-three students are compelled to seek new quarters. They have been duly provided for, thanks to the consideration of our people. The loss is estimated at twenty thousand dollars, partly covered by insurance. The college authorities are making temporary arrangements suitable to the emergency.

Heavy Loss.

LONDON, December 8.—The fire at Foster, Porter & Co's last night is the greatest in London since the famous Tooley street fire. The loss is estimated at upwards of $13,000,000, the stock of silk alone being valued at $3,000,000. Eight persons were injured, some of them seriously. Nearly an entire square was burned, to the extent of about ten acres, at 10 o'clock this morning. Streams of water are still being poured on the burning mass. One fireman is missing.

Senator Butler's Sorrow.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Senator Butler, of South Carolina, when congratulated on his re-election to another senatorial term, said it was nothing to him, in view of the fact that his son was now lying at the point of death. The young man was brought home from Princeton college, where he would have been graduated the coming year, seriously ill and has been gradually growing worse since. It is the Senator's second son and one much beloved. The distinguished father has a cot in his son's room and passes the night in ministering to his boy. During the day his restlessness in the senate chamber betrays his constant anxiety. The younger Butler, who is said to be an unusually intelligent young man, is feared to have been stricken with the fatal malady known as Bright's disease.

Seaman Ninderman's Narrative.

WASHINGTON, December 7.—Seaman Ninderman continued his narrative of the voyage of the Jeannette before the board this morning, taking up the thread of the story at the point where he and Noros were found in a hut by a native on October 22, 1881. He described graphically and at great length the vain attempts of himself and his comrade to make the natives understand. They were well treated by them during their travels and were supplied with clothing. After leaving the hut they were conducted to Belun, where they finally fell in with Melville. In answer to the judge-advocate, Ninderman said that if the natives had been able to understand him both he and Noros would have been willing to go back in search of the rest of the party. At this point the court adjourned.

Extradition Refused.

BOSTON, Dec. 10.—A hearing was had yesterday in the United States district court, Judge Nelson presiding, in the matter of a petition from the English authorities for the extradition of Eliot Ryder, charged with having forged the signature of Minister James Russell Lowell to a bill of exchange for $100. The court refused to grant the petition, on the ground that the case was not properly brought, inasmuch as the papers forwarded to this country were not properly certified by the American minister. The court ordered the discharge of the defendant. Application was made by the attorney for the English authorities for a postponement, in order that the papers might be rectified, but the court refused to grant the motion.

Can't Stand It.

NEW YORK, December 10.—Owing to the action taken by the police commissioners the laws of the penal code were not enforced to-day with the stringency of last Sunday. Barber shops and news stands were open and arrests were few. Yet except the Jewish establishments on avenues A and B, all stores were closed. this being especially noticable on the bowery. One man was arrested for shoveling snow but was discharged. About one thousand people, mostly Germans, met on the east side under the auspices of the socialistic labor party and protested against the code, the commission that drew it, the police commissioners and insisting on its revision, but demanding that until revised it be strictly enforced.

Victims of Blackmail.

BUFFALO, Dec. 8.—The operations of a dashing and handsome female blackmailer formed an interesting theme of conversation here last evening. It transpires that the police have just driven the notorious Mrs. "Dick" Gross out of the city, and she is now plying her vocation in the oil country, where her victims are becoming as thick as blackberries in summer. While in Buffalo, after being ordered out of Cleveland and Pittsburg, Mrs. Gross became quite conspicuous for her attention to gentlemen of means. She is a young and handsome woman. After ensnaring her victims she has been blackmailing them, compelling them to give her "hush money" and valuable presents under threats of exposure.

The Fatal Noose.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 8.—Will Porter was hanged at Perry, Ga., to-day. He had nothing to say.

CHARLESTON, Mo., Dec. 8.—Albert Sanders, colored, was hanged to-day for the murder of Moses Wing, also colored.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 8.—Gustave Paul was hanged to-day at Donaldsonville for the murder of Eve Thompson.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 8.—Edward Conners, colored, was hanged to-day.

The President's Nominations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The President sent a large number of nominations for postmasterships to the Senate to-day, besides the following naval appointments: Commodore Edmund R. Calhoun to be a rear admiral; Masters A. P. McIntosh and Charles G. Calkins to be lieutenants; Ensign David Daniels to be master; Surgeon Edward S. Bogert to be a medical inspector; Passed Assistant Surgeons John C. Wise and John L. Neilson to be surgeons.

Marine Disasters.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The German bark Argonaut, Captain Bremers, from Bremen for New York, is ashore on the Island of Terschelling, and is probably a total wreck. The captain and ten of the crew were drowned. Four of the crew were saved.

A steamer, name not ascertained, struck on the rocks near Penzance to-day and was foundered. The storm continues.

THE FLOWER CITY FURORE.

THE COMMOTION CAUSED BY THE STATEMENT OF A PHYSICIAN.

An unusual article from the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle, was published in this paper recently and has been the subject of much conversation both in professional circles and on the street. Apparently it caused more commotion in Rochester, as the following from the same paper shows:

Dr. J. W. Henion, who is well known, not only in Rochester, but in nearly every part of America, sent an extended article to this paper a few days since which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal enquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation of the subject was deemed an editorial necessity.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion, at his residence on St. Paul street, when the following interview occurred:

"That article of yours, Doctor, has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. Few people ever get so near the grave as I did and then return, and I am not surprised that people think it marvelous. It was marvelous."

"How in the world did you, a physician, come to be brought so low?"

"By neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull, indefinite pains and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious."

"But have these common ailments anything to do with the fearful Bright's disease which took so firm a hold on you?"

"Anything? Why, they are the sure indications of the first stages of that dreadful malady. The fact is, few people know or realize what ails them, and I am sorry to say that too few physicians do either."

"That is a strange statement, Doctor."

"But it is a true one. The medical profession have been treating symptoms instead of diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. We doctors have been clipping off the twigs when we should strike at the root. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of Bright's disease even more surely than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough, but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, stomach, pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of these ailments."

"This, then, is what you meant when you said that more than one-half the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it, Doctor?"

"Precisely. Thousands of so-called diseases are torturing people to-day, when in reality it is Bright's disease in some one of its many forms. It is a hydra headed monster, and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints which I see now were caused by Bright's disease."

"And did all these cases have simple symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy—Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I am getting my eyes thoroughly opened in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also. Why, there are no end of truths bearing on this subject. If you want to know more about it go and see Mr. Warner himself. He was sick the same as I, and is the healthiest man in Rochester to-day. He has made a study of this subject and can give you more facts than I can. Go, too, and see Dr. Lattimore, the chemist, at the University. If you want facts there are any quantity of them showing the alarming increase of Bright's disease, its simple and deceptive symptoms, and that there is but one way by which it can be escaped."

Fully satisfied of the truth of the Doctor's words, the reporter bade him good day and called on Mr. Warner at his establishment on Exchange street. At first Mr. Warner was inclined to be reticent, but learning that the information desired was about the alarming increase of Bright's disease, his manner changed instantly and he spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease has increased wonderfully, and we find, by reliable statistics, that in the past ten years its growth has been 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off: Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wilson, Carpenter, Bishop Haven and others. This is terrible, and shows a greater growth than that of any other known complaint. It should be plain to every one that something must be done to check this increase or there is no knowing where it may end."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it, Mr Warner?"

"Hundreds of thousands. I have a striking example of this truth which has just come to my notice. A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. In order to show the contrast between healthy and unhealthy fluids, he had provided a vial the contents of which were drawn from his own person. 'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as you have seen the unhealthy indications, I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health,' and he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the result his countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him, and in a trembling voice he said: 'Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys,' and in less than a year he was dead."

"You believe then that it has no symptoms of its own and is frequently unknown even by persons who are afflicted with it?"

"It has no symptoms of its own and very often none at all. Usually no two people have the same symptoms, and frequently death is the first symptom. The slightest indications of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one. I know what I am talking about, for I have been through all the stages of kidney disease."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes, I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wonderful, is it not?"

"A very prominent case but no more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe then that Bright's disease can be cured?"

"I know it can. I know from the experience of hundreds of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your own experience, what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I found it was kidney difficulty I thought there was little hope and so did the doctors. I have since learned that one of the physicians pointed me out to a gentle man on the street one day, saying: 'there goes a man who will be dead within a year.' I believe his words would have proven true if I had not fortunately secured and used the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure."

"And this caused you to manufacture it?"

"No, it caused me to investigate. I went to the principal cities, saw physicians prescribing and using it and I therefore determined, as a duty I owed to humanity and the suffering, to bring it within their reach and now it is known in every part of America, is sold in every drug store and has become a household necessity."

The reporter left Mr. Warner, much impressed with the earnestness and sincerity of his statements and next paid a visit to Dr. S. A. Lattimore at his residence on Prince Street. Dr. Lattimore, although busily engaged upon some matters connected with the State Board of Health, of which he is one of the analysts, courteously answered the questions that were propounded him.

"Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did this analysis show you?"

"The presence of albumen and tube casts in great abundance."

"And what did the symptoms indicate?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?"

"No, sir. I did not think it possible. It was seldom, indeed, that so pronounced a case had, up to that time, ever been cured."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"Yes, I have chemically analyzed it and upon critical examination, find it entirely free from any poisonous or deleterious substances."

We publish the foregoing statements in view of the commotion which the publicity of Dr. Henion's article has caused and to meet the protestations which have been made. The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. They conclusively show that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, alarmingly increasing and that it can be cured.

—We are advised by Mr. Thomas E. Watt, Passenger Agent of the Western District of the Pennsylvania Railroad, that he has just finished a number of alterations at his office, Fifth avenue and Smithsfield street, Pittsburg, Pa., including increased space and all modern accommodations for promptly waiting on purchasers and inquirers. At the same time he will make a needed correction in the number of his office sign, 110 Fifth avenue, instead of 78, at which place he is found ready to direct, via. proper route, to all points in the East, as well as the West, Northwest and Southwest. Of course all communications should now be addressed to him at 110 instead of 78.

—A Map of Pennsylvania is still given by The Philadelphia Weekly Press to those who send $1.50 for one year's subscription. There is no better map of this State, and is itself worth the price asked for map and paper.

—You will be surprised to see the list of valuable books offered in the premium lists to subscribers to the Philadelphia Weekly Press. Address a postal card, and ask for a specimen copy and list.

—"Picturesque Journeys in America of the Junior United Tourist Club" is the title of a handsomely bound volume, just from the press, a copy of which has been laid upon our table. As will be inferred from the title the publication is devoted to a description, very beautifully illustrated, of picturesque America, and those cities and towns which offer special attractions to the tourist. The work opens with a graphic description of the Yosemite valley and its wealth of wonders, and from this point the reader is taken on a delightful journey to all the noted resorts in America, from the Pacific coast to the rock-bound shores of Maine. The illustrations are true to nature, and the descriptive matter arranged in a manner that cannot fail to interest and instruct the reader. Besides being a valuable companion to the tourist, it is a very useful and instructive work and should be in every household, particularly where there are children. This book is published by R. Worthington, 770 Broadway, New York City, and may be obtained at H. Y. Stitzer's book store, Bellefonte.

—The temperature Thursday morning was not so low as was generally supposed by those who jumped out of bed at an early hour. At least two thermometers that marked exactly the same degree of cold indicated only 2° above zero, although those who came in contact with the wind imagined that it was frigid enough to send the mercury far below that point. But almost every citizen whom we met, whether suffering from the cold or not, carried a basket and was on his way to Sechler's famous grocery store. That is the best place to purchase groceries in winter or summer, and people throughout the length and breadth of this county are rapidly finding that out, and they will be benefitted in purse and store by the discovery.

—An item has been going the rounds of the city and country press to the effect that ex-Congressman Yocum, of this place, contemplates a change of residence and that he will soon move to Tennessee. The information which this item contains is quite correct. He will leave Bellefonte for his new home on or about the second day of January, prox. He, in company with other gentlemen, have purchased 33,000 acres of land in Washington county, Tennessee, near Johnson City, where they will engage extensively in the tanning business. The land which they have purchased is splendidly wooded, principally with cherry, walnut, rock oak and red oak. Mr. Yocum will sell his personal property on Thursday, the 21st instant. His family will not follow him to Tennessee until next spring. We shall be sorry to lose them.

—Beautiful editions of standard books are sent with subscriptions to to the Philadelphia Weekly Press at ridiculously low figures. By the way, do you know that is the best of weekly newspapers? Write for a specimen copy and see.

It is a splendid book in every way. A copy should be in every home, where every mother and every mother's friend can have access to it." Price $2.75. Agents are wanted by the publisher, E. B. Treat, 757 Broadway, New York.

Barnum is enjoyed with his acquisition—the baby elephant—and declares $300,000 could not buy it. He offers $52,000 for an insurance of the life of the infant for 52 weeks. Surely, if he knew the full value of Peruna and Manalin, he would do no such foolish thing, as they are the most successful protective medicines that have ever been introduced to the human family. No one can take any disease while taking Peruna before each meal, and keeping the bowels regular with Manalin. Ask your druggist for the book on the "Ills of Life."

A Man Dropped Dead in His Shoes.

During the late storm a poor and shabby looking man stepped into the Boston Clothing Store, lately opened in Reynolds' block, Bellefonte, Pa., and picked up a heavy winter overcoat and inquired the price. The clerk spoke up, $2.75. The man was so astonished at the low price that he dropped suddenly to the floor. The clerk thought the man was dying, so he put a large dose of steeped smartweed and a handful of salt, with cold water, down his throat and bringing him up to the stove rubbed him with kerosene oil and soap, and by those means brought the man to his senses, when he said: "I was so astonished at the low price of that overcoat." Mr. L. Schuneberg, the proprietor of the store, went to work and dressed the man up in one of their heavy winter overcoats, coat, pants, vest, boots, cap, etc. Then he went off looking like a Dutch King. Therefore, we advise every man and boy to go to this reliable place for their winter clothing, boots and shoes.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

ECLECTIC MAGAZINE.—The December number of the Eclectic is at hand, and is one of the best of the year. The vivid sea-story, "The 'Lady Maud,'" is brought to a conclusion, and every variety of taste will find something to suit it in the table of contents, which is as follows "Comets," by Richard A. Proctor; "An Editor's Valedictory," by John Morley; "Songs without Words," a curious study in natural history, by Dr. Andrew Wilson; "Dreams," by Walter Herrie Pollock; "A Glimpse of the United States;" "Nottingham Lace: Its History and Manufacture;" "A Venetian Medley," by James Addington Symonds; "The Work of Rivers;" "Modern Pirates in the Mediterranean;" "Atheistic Scientists," by John Stuart Blackie; "Faith and Unfaith," by C. AROUND THE HOUSE.—One of the most noteworthy of the illustrated books for children of the present season is Around the House, with bright, jingling rhymes, by Mr. Edward Willet, and pictures in colors from designs by Mr. Charles Kendrick. Mr. Willet is one of the best known of the young journalists of New York, and in using his leisure from more serious work to write these taking rhymes for the little ones, he has shown an appreciation for their fancies and tastes, which is rare indeed among writers. Mr. Kendrick's versatile pencil is tested weekly on our illustrated papers, but he has never done better work than in these dainty bits of child life. The book is published by R. Worthington, New York.

CHATTERBOX JUNIOR.—The word "Chatterbox" has become suggestive to little ears of literary and artistic treasures, which were unheard of by the children of a generation ago. Among the books which bear this name, "Chatterbox Junior," is very attractive. Its many pictures, with the accompanying sketches, will afford profitable amusement through many a long winter evening. It has a cover of vivid colors, which will make any child dance with delight. It is published by R. Worthington, 770 Broadway, New York.

That Christmas or New Year cards are growing in popularity as remembrances between friends at the holiday season and that there is a large stock from which to select in Belle fonte.

—The fourteenth semi-annual meeting of the Central Pennsylvania Medical Association will be held in Altoona on the 20th instant. The association embraces in its territory the counties of Blair, Cambria, Centre, Huntingdon, Indiana and Westmoreland. Dr. C. M. Ewing, of Tyrone, is president of the association, and Dr. H. F. Beam, of Johnstown, the secretary. A medical association gathering is certainly suggestive. It reminds us of good health, and we'll bet those learned doctors, were the question introduced among their deliberations, would unite in the advice to all people in Centre county to purchase groceries of Sechler & Co. Our friends who desire good health should bear this in mind and purchase all their groceries of Sechler.

—The Weekly Press of Philadelphia may be conscientiously commended as a newspaper for the family circle. It is able and vigorous, but always decorous in its treatment of all social and political questions, gives the news of the day with freshness, fairness, and fearlessness; and its several departments, all in charge of journalists or specialists of recognized fitness, touch every current topic of human interest. Among the special features of The Weekly Press are its letters from all of the great political centres; foreign correspondence; contributions to the unwritten history of the late war; a page every week of carefully prepared agricultural miscellany; a full fashion and household department; suggestions for winter pastimes; literary reviews and notes; a good complete story; the news of the churches, and complete market reports. For a sample copy, and premium lists, address The Press, Philadelphia, Pa. Those who get up clubs will do well to write for terms.

—There are few people who feed stock, who are posted in the value of Cotton seed and Linseed meal. Professor Jordan, of the State College, seems to be a practical man. He has recently requested Alexander & Co. to order 15 tons of Cotton Seed meal which he proposes to feed to his stock cattle on the College farm. This meal only costs about $1.75 per 100 pounds. One pound of it is equal to three pounds of oats or corn or eight pounds of wheat bran. It is fed in the proportion of one pound of Linseed meal to five pounds of corn or oat meal or eight pounds of wheat bran.

THE LATEST NEWS.

A Donble Suicide.

BALTIMORE, December 5.—Two young men, both of them members of the Fifth regiment, committed suicide yesterday in this city. There were some very tragic circumstances attending both their deaths. One of the men was John W. Dorsey, son of Judge Reuben Dorsey, of Howard county, who put a bullet into his brain in his room at No. 156 West Biddle street. Dorsey had been engaged to Miss Venie Taylor, daughter of R. Q. Taylor, the leading Baltimore hatter. Some time ago Mr. Taylor saw fit to break the engagement, as he did not think Dorsey was able to support a wife, Dorsey had inherited nearly $50,000, but lost it in oil stock speculations. The father's ban did not prevent secret visits between Dorsey and Miss Taylor, but Dorsey saw that he would not be able to marry the girl without the consent of her father, and he became very despondent. He went to his room about 11 o'clock yesterday and wrote four letters—one to his employer, Mr. Lambert Gittings; another to his landlady, a third to his sweetheart and the fourth to her mother. In these he told about his love and his cause for suicide. He then threw himself upon the bed, took his sweetheart's picture in his one hand and his revolver in the other, and fired at his forehead. The bullet entered his brain. as soon as Miss Taylor heard the news she came to the house, and falling upon her knees by the bedside wept bitterly until she was taken out of the room. The tragedy is a sad one and has created a sensation in social circles in northwest Baltimore, where both parties are well known.

The other suicide was that of Warwick H. Butler, son of a leading Protestant Episcopal clergyman of Prince George's county, Maryland. He had been leading a fast life for a few weeks, and yesterday morning, while in a disreputable house, shot himself through the heart. There were at least twenty girls in the house at the time, and the suicide caused great commotion among them. His body was taken away by friends.

Professional Resurrectionists.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—Frank McNamee, "Dutch" Pillet and Levi Chew (the latter a colored man) were arrested last night while driving a wagon containing five dead bodies to the medical college. The bodies had been stolen from the Lebanon cemetery, in the lower part of the city. The prisoners are professional resurrectionists and their operations have been carried on for a long time. Two more arrests were made early this morning, when a detective visited the cemetery ground and arrested Robert Chew, its superintendent, and Andrew Mullen. All the prisoners will have a hearing this afternoon. The prisoner Frank McNamee had a contract with the government for carrying the mails between this city and Newton Square, Delaware county. Mullen drove the wagon with this mail and was about to start on his journey this morning when taken into custody. He claimed immunity from arrest on this account, and was accordingly released upon his promise to attend the hearing this afternoon.

LATER.—The prisoners were this afternoon held in $5,000 each for a further hearing on Friday next. After the hearing the crowd of colored people made a rush for the prisoners with evident intention of lynching them, and a number of policemen were sent for to protect them. They were finally locked up at the Central station.

License or No License.

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—Municipal elections were held in a number of cities in the commonwealth to-day. Politics did not enter largely into the contests, the principal struggle having been on license or no license. In Chelsea the entire republican ticket was elected and 17 majority was given for license. Fitchburg elects the citizens ticket and votes for license. Haverhill elects the citizens ticket and votes for license. Malden elects the republican ticket and votes for no license. Taunton elects a prohibitory ticket and votes heavy against license. Gloucester elects a republican mayor and votes for license. Laurence democrats elect the mayor and the majority of the city council. Brocton overturned a prohibitory government, elected a democratic mayor and a majority of republican aldermen and voted strongly for license. At Springfield H. M. Phillips, republican, is elected. The city votes for license. At Holyoke the citizens ticket was elected and license voted for by a large majority. New Bedford elects a majority of the citizens' ticket and votes against license. Fall River re-elects Bradly, democrat, for mayor. The republicans have a majority in the aldermen and council. There is a large majority in favor of license.

Slayback's Slayer Released.

ST. LOUIS, December 6.—In the court of criminal correction this morning the case of the state against John A. Cockrill, for murder in the second degree was stricken from the docket. This was on account of the action of the grand jury in ignoring the bill. The bondsmen were also released and the last phase of the Cockrill-Slayback tragedy is ended.

The Transit.

BOSTON, December 6.—During the transit of Venus to-day all four contacts were satisfactorily observed. At the Harvard college observatory over eight hundred measures of the diameter of Venus were obtained. Observations with the spectroscope showed no perceptible absorbtion by the atmosphere of Venus. Pyrometrical observations showed that the disc of Venus was darker than the sky surrounding the sun.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—The weather has been beautifully clear since daylight, giving local astronomers a fine chance for the observance of the transit of Venus, which they are improving. Professor Elias Colbert, of the Tribune, made arrangements for a complete scientific observation. Smoked glasses are in the hands of many citizens.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The weather this morning was quite cloudy, consequently about a dozen photographs of the transit of Venus were obtained at the Naval observatory. The weather is now clear and observers expect to be more successful this afternoon.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—In consequence of the unfavorable weather the transit of Venus was totally invisible from Greenwich observatory.

OTTOWA, Dec. 6.—An observer here took a successful observation of the transit of Venus at the interval ingress this morning.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The weather is clear and favorable for satisfactory observations of the transit of Venus.

Some Sensible Advice.

CHICAGO, Ills., December 5.—The following statement of Mr. Porter's views and intentions comes from a gentleman closely associated with with him and is authoritive. Mr. Porter has no objection to the building of necessary lines but does object to roads being built by construction companies in the interest of Milwaukee and St. Paul officials, into territory where there is not business enough to support even one line, and afterward selling such lines to the Milwaukee and St. Paul company at an immense profit, and then demanding that such competitive business be pooled. Such indiscriminate building of railroads is of no benefit to the country. It is a positive injury. It destroys confidence in railroad securities and ultimately brings financial disasters and neces sarily increases the cost of transportation. This statement derives special significance from the fact that the New York meeting on Friday is to consider the points made.

A Boiler Explodes.

NEW ORLEANS, December 6.—The boiler of the propeller "Morning Star," plying between this city and Magnolia, exploded this morning at Belair plantation. Of twenty-one persons on board three were killed, eight drowned and six badly if not fatally scalded. The steamer "Sunbeam" was near by and at once returned to the rescue and brought the wounded to the city. They were sent to the hospital. Jack Johnston, white, the fireman, and seven colored roustabouts were drowned. The killed are Henry Keiser. Nancy Gardner, colored, and a child named Joseph Simederin. The badly scalded are, Eugene Pennywith, the engineer; James Ryan, boilermaker; Mary Miller, colored, passenger; Frank Halt and William Trantz, employees of the boat, and Sarah Young

A $130,000 Fire.

PHILADELPHIA, November 5.—One of William Arrott's twin mills at Coral and Taylor streets was destroyed by fire this afternoon. The occupants were Thomas Jager & Co., manufacturers of woolen yarn, who occupied the fourth and fifth floors; Robert Beatty, cotton spinner; Grant Brothers, woolen yarn; Stead & Miller, woolen yarn, and Joseph Grier & Co., in the same business. The total loss is estimated at $130,000, $45,000 of which is on the building and the balance on the stock. Thomas McDade and Robert Burns, firemen, were injured by falling walls. The entire loss on stock is fully covered. Arrott has about $7,000 insurance on the building.

Horrible Death of an Engineer.

TOWANDA, Pa., December 6.—When the accident occurred at Rummersfield last night, Engineer Foulk, who was pinioned in the cab of his own wrecked locomotive, saw flames spreading around him, and called to the train hands to cut away the cab. His right leg could not be extricated and he knew he must roast alive unless the cab was cut away. The spectators fruitlessly tried to release him, but the flames spread so rapidly that no one could get near enough to the cab to work with axes.

Anthony Trollope.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Anthony Trollope, the novelist, died yesterday afternoon. He had been suffering from congestion of the lungs and failure of action of the heart. He died at 3 o'clock after lying in an unconscious condition all day. For a week past he had been so weak that artificial means of sustaining life had to be employed.

Anthony Trollope was born on April 23, 1815. He was the second son of the late Thomas Anthony Trollope, barrister-at-law. His mother, Mrs. Frances Trollope, the daughter of William Milton, an English curate, was yet to gain the reputation of an authoress that she afterward acquired. The instincts of a writer predominated in her character, and it was while standing by his mother's side that young Trollope first plunged into the realms of fiction. Almost daily Mrs. Trollope wove wonderful tales of fairies and giants, of bold lords and brilliant ladies for the edification of her little folks. Before Anthony began an academic course his young brain teemed with strange fancies and fictions. He was educated at Winchester and Harrow. He wrote for the Pall Mall Gazette, and edited three volumes of reprint for the Gazette entitled respectively "Hunting Sketches," "Traveling Sketches," and "Clergymen of the Church of England." He resigned his position in the government employ, and in 1868 became editor of the St. Paul Magazine, a postion which he held for some years. Mr. Trollope wrote a number of novels. Among his best known works may be mentioned "Phineas Phinn, the Irish Member," published while the author was connected with the St. Paul Magazine; "He Knew He Was Right," 1869; "The Vicar of Bullhampton," 1870; "Sir Harry Hotspur, of Humblethwaite," 1871; "The Golden Lion of Grandpere," 1872, and "The American Senator," 1877. He also published a work on "American Travels."

Preparing for Train Robbers.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 6.—Owing to the boldness of train robbers and an unusual number of bad or suspicious characters infesting the towns and country in the northern part of Texas, the railroad companies are taking unusual precautions to protect their trains. Commencing to-day all the passenger and express trains on the Texas and Pacific road will carry a strong force of state rangers as a guard between Fort Worth and El Paso, and the other roads will probably pursue the same course.

Horrible Railroad Accident.

TOWANDA, Pa., Dec. 5.—An accident caused by a misplaced switch, occurred on the Lehigh Valley railroad to-day at Rummersfield. A freight train standing on the siding was run into by express train No. 8. Engineer Foulk and fireman Kingsland of the freight train, were burned to death and R. Mullan, a brakeman, was badly hurt. Both engines were totally wrecked. The baggage and express cars and sleepers were burned and also the mails. None of the passengers were injured.

If Gabriel should read all the obituaries on tombstones before he blows his horn, he will think the occupants were put in wrong graves when he sees most of them rise.

ANOTHER CURE UTTERLY WITHOUT A PRECEDENT.

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 10, 1881.

DR. HARTMAN: I cannot but express my thanks to you for the great benefit I received from the use of Peruna and Manalin. One bottle of each placed me squarely on my feet, after a long sickness, which had laid me in bed and then left me lame and crippled. Three days' use of these remedies dispensed with the cane, and in a week I was perfectly well.

Safe Burglary.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 6.—The Times-Star London, Ohio, special says that burglars entered Jacob Weber's saloon this morning, blew open the safe, and stole $1,200 in money and valuables. They overlooked a certificate of deposit for $1,300.

The Rev. Chas. E. Piper, of Wakefield, R. I., writes: "I have used Baxter's Mandrake Bitters in my family for over two years, and as a result have not called a physician in the whole time. My wife had been an invalid for years, but these Bitters have cured her." Price 25 cts, per bottle.

At a hotel in Oswego, says the Times, a couple from the country, of Milesian extraction, took seats at the dinner table. Directly after a young man seated himself opposite and took a stalk of celery from the dish and commenced eating it. The old lady opposite looked at him a moment with an air of disgust, and then nudging her husband, said, in a stage wisper, "D'ye moind the blackguard ateing the bokay?"

A Kentucky man in taking a drink of cider the other day swallowed a live yellow-jacket, which stung him several times in its passage down his throat. He immediately bought a barrel of the cider, saying that it had as much "snap" in it and was just as warming as fifty-cent whisky, and was twenty per cent. cheaper.

Sometimes we think a highly organized thief makes the best newspaper editor. Or are we the victims of delusion when we find in the columns of our esteemed contemporaries original productions which we were fortunate enough to be first to print, and had fondly supposed to be our own?

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, when sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggists for it. Each bottle is warranted. Smith, Kline & Co., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York. 14 24 1y

THE SUN.—NEW YORK, 1883.

More people have read The Sun during the year just now passing than ever before since it was first printed. No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.

We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like The Sun for the following reasons, among others:

Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the deeds and misdeeds, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the improving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.

Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs The Sun makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the face of dissent as plainly and fearlessly as when supported by general approval. The Sun has absolutely no purpose to serve, save the information of its readers and the furtherance of the common good.

Because it is everybody's newspaper. No man is so humble that The Sun is indifferent to his welfare and his rights. No man is so rich that it can allow injustice to be done him. No man, no association of men, is powerful enough to be exempt from the strict application of its principles of right and wrong.

Because in politics it has fought for a dozen years, without intermission and sometimes almost alone among newspapers, the fight that has resulted in the recent overwhelming popular verdict against Robesonianism and for honest government. No matter what party is in power, The Sun stands and will continue to stand like a rock for the interest of the people against the ambition of bosses, the encroachments of monopolists, and the dishonest schemes of public robbers.

All this is what we are told almost daily by our friends. One man holds that The Sun is the best religious paper ever published, because its Christianity is undiluted with cant. Another holds that it is the best Republican newspaper printed, because it has already whipped half of the rascals out of that party, and is proceeding against the other half with undiminished vigor. A third believes it to be the best magazine of general literature in existence, because its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. So every friend of The Sun discovers one of its many sides that appeals with particular force to this individual liking.

If you already know The Sun, you will observe that in 1883 it is a little better than ever before. If you do not already know The Sun you will find it to be the mirror of all human activity, a storehouse of the choicest products of common sense and imagination, a mainstay for the cause of honest government, a sentinel for genuine Jeffersonian Democracy, a scourge for wickedness of every species, and an uncommonly good investment for the coming year.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or Seminal weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by Self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

The Adventure of a Former Bellefonter.

Mr. W. Penn Bigony, who clerked at the Bush House, during the regime of the late Mr. George Hoppes as proprietor, is now located at West Branch, Mich. A recent thrilling experience while on a hunting excursion in that vicinity is thus recorded by the Ogama Times, published at that place:

"Penn Bigony, one of the gentlemanly clerks at Gustin Merrill & Co.'s store at this place, and three or four of his friends, went out hunting one day the fore part of the week at George's lake and vicinity. They had used up their ammunition duck shooting, and were crossing the lake in a boat, when one of the party saw a deer in the lake making for the shore. The boat was put ashore and Penn made for a runway near by, where the deer would have to pass, and took his position between two cedars. He saw the deer approaching some 40 feet away, and made ready for the attack. Ammunition gone his gun was of but little use to him, but Penn was further armed with a large hunting knife and a revolver, but under the circumstances he had forgotten that he was in possession of the latter. He drew his knife and as the noble buck of 175 pounds walked past him, drove the knife to the hilt into the deer's back. The deer staggered on four or five rods and fell dead. It seems rather singular, that a deer would pass so near a man, and not discover his presence, but such is the case as all of the party can testify and were eye witnesses to the act. It was a hazardous underdaking for Penn, for had he not inflicted a deadly wound, the deer might have turned upon him, and made it decidedly unpleasant to say the least. It was one of those daring deeds, that occur but once in a life time, and which but few men have the courage to do."

Across the Sun.

The fair planet Venus began her transit across the sun's disk about 9 a. m. on Wednesday, the 6th instant, appearing on the lower edge of that orb and slowly taking her course upward. The inhabitants in our town were transformed for the time into an army of astronomers. Each one armed with a piece of smoked glass stood at some convenient point and gazed long and earnestly at Old Sol. As a rule, those endowed with the most acute observation, without reference to astronomical knowledge or skill, were best able to behold the dark object which seemed so small when placed in comparison with the King of Day. It is a subject of deep congratulation that the sky was clear that morning, as many accurate observations were doubtless taken which will prove of importance in solving the intricate problems of the heavens. The astronomers expect to figure out from this transit, in connection with the records of previous ones, the exact distance of Venus from the earth and from the sun, and when these distances are known any expert astronomer can ascertain all the other distances in the heavens, tell how far apart are all the stars, how fast they move and even how much they weigh. More than that, even, they expect to learn whether or not the suspected planet Vulcan really exists between Mercury and the sun.

TRANSIT NOTES.

An essay on the transit was read in the public school on Tuesday and as a consequence all the children came prepared to make observations with smoked glass.

More than one hundred years will elapse before the next transit will occur to be visible in the United States.

The Hog Cholera.

The disease known as hog cholera, which proves so destructive to the lives of the hog creation and in the ravages which it inflicts seriously affects those who own a large number of these animals, seems to be prevailing to an unusual extent in some parts of this county, especially in the vicinity of Nittany. Farmers expect to raise enough pork for their own use and some to sell, but this disease attacks their hogs and often takes away all that they own. In some instances hogs will become ill and die in a day; in other cases they linger for weeks. We have heard of one farmer who lost one hundred dollars' worth of swine by this disease, and nearly all the owners of hogs in and about Nittany have lost part of their stock. Various remedies are tried for it, including arsenic and soft soap, but none of them prove the true panacea for the disease.

—P. Gray Meek, editor of the Bellefonte Watchman, is a candidate for chief clerk of the state house of representatives. He has been visiting Pittsburg and the western section of the state, looking up votes.—Altoona Tribune.

Interesting to Brakemen.

A Scranton man named Halsted has recently invented a very simple and common sense devise for protecting the fingers, arms and heads of railroad brakemen while they are in the act of coupling cars. The bumpers of some of the coal and other cars are narrow, and when such cars are linked to those on which the bumpers are higher, the narrow bumpers are apt to pass one another, thus causing the brakeman to be in danger of receiving hand or arm wounds. Mr. Halsted's car coupler consists of a strap of wrought iron which is fastened to one side of the bumper by bolts. Just below the under side of the bumper there is a division of the strap, in which there is a hinge, and through which a lever is operated. The lever is on the side of the bumper near the right hand of the brakeman as he stands with his right side to the end of the car. The handle of the lever is nearly a foot long. When it is not in use the other end of the lever hangs under the bumpers. When it is in use it raises the link to the proper height, the bolt drops into its place, the cars are coupled and the brakeman runs not a particle of risk of having his hands and arms crushed. He is not obliged to place his arms between the bumpers, and he can couple cars with safety. The couplers are placed on each end of the cars.—Altoona Tribune.

Tribute of Respect to Mrs. Annie Lytle.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst by death on Nov. 25, 1882, the companion of brother Andrew Lytle, of Victor Grange, No. 159. Therefore, we hereby record our tribute to her memory.

Resolved, That while her departure has saddened many hearts, we still recognize in this, as in all other events of His providence, the hand of a loving Father.

Resolved, That the many ennobling virtues of the deceased endeared her to all who knew her.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathies to our bereaved brother and the motherless children, and point them in this sad hour of trial to Him who has said: "Though thou passeth through the waters I will be with thee, and the rivers they shall not overflow thee. Furthermore,

Resolved, That a copy of this tribute be sent to Brother Lytle, and that it be published in the Farmers' Friend, the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN and the Democratic Watchman.

MISS LIZZIE F. BAKER,
MRS. J. R. DALE,
MRS. L. THOMPSON.
Committee.

Ex-Governor Curtin on Railroads.

According to the Lock Haven Journal, Congressman Curtin made use of the following language while in that city lately: "The people of Pennsylvania ought to be thankful to Mr. Vanderbilt for investing so much money in Pennsylvania. His line from Harrisburg west to Pittsburg will be shorter than the Penn'a Central, and will, of course, make better time. His new roads up Pine Creek will soon be finished and the Beech Creek line will undoubtedly be built. Vanderbilt owns considerably more than one half the Reading stock and many of its bonds. He is, therefore, anxious to get as many good feeders as possible. He will in the future have under his control the greatest corporation in the world! Had Tom Scott lived, Vanderbilt would not have gotten this hold in Pennsylvania, but President Roberts is too slow and conservative."

—An Altoona man, according to the Tribune, caught cold the other night in the following remarkable manner: "I caught it," he says, "in the funniest way imaginable. Last night I dreamed that I was in pursuit of a criminal. He gave me a pretty tight race until we came to the ank of a stream into which he plunged, soon reaching the opposite shore. I stopped to undress, which being accomplished, in I went. The water was pretty deep and decidedly cold, so that I was half frozen when I got across. What became of the man I was after I don't know, but I've been sneezing ever since. That bath was too much for me." This is a fine illustration of the power of imagination.

—The total number of workmen discharged from the service of the Pennsylvania railroad during the past few weeks will not exceed 500, notwithstanding the report that the number was much larger. There are no evidences that the working force will be further decreased.

—Mr. A. A. Krape, of Lena, Stephenson county, Illinois, has been reelected county superintendent of public schools. He is a son of Mr. William Krape, formerly of Penn township, this county.

—During the past week there has been every kind of weather imaginable and a few varieties never before dreamed of.

A Forged Check.

On Friday, the 2d instant, a young man who is not altogether unknown in this community entered the First National Bank and presented for payment a check for $250, purporting to be signed by Mr. John Stuart, of State College. The signature, however, was spelled "Stewart," from which Mr. John Harris, the cashier, at once detected that it was a forgery He refused to pay the money and the fellow departed and has not since been seen in this vicinity.

The fellow who presented the check and doubtless committed the forgery don't bear a very enviable reputation for honesty. He is now hiding from justice. His friends will probably intercede in his behalf and prevent the proper punishment being visited upon him.

—It was seriously proposed to offer prayer that Wednesday, the 6th instant, might be clear in order that successful observations of the transit could be taken. We do not know how many prayers were made, but that morning the sky was as clear in this vicinity as could be desired. No observations of the important occurrence were made at the Bellefonte Academy, but we have no doubt that the astronomers at the State College looked long and earnestly at the sun from the beginning to the end of Venus' journey over his disk, but owing to the distance of that institution from a Western Union office and the consequent impracticability of obtaining correct Washington time, we suppose the observations will not be of much practical value.

Local Department.

—The demand for skates is brisk at present.

—The freezing weather renders the roads very rough.

—Traveling salesmen are numerous in Bellefonte.

—It is said that deer hunting will end on the 15th inst.

—Puck is the most witty illustrated magazine published.

—Lock Haven apprehends a water famine this winter.

—Cold weather gives a pink tinge to the complexion. It also makes the feet nimble.

—Ann Butler, resident in the vicinity of the Bellefonte Car Works, died at an early hour Monday morning.

—The work of decorating the interior of the Episcopal church for the Christmas season will be commenced next week.

—John F. Smith, of Fillmore, was a caller at this office on Saturday. He will remove to Philipsburg in the near future.

—The owners of ice houses in Lock Haven have already begun to put in ice. The cakes are large and clear and about six inches thick.

—The green house on Judge Meyer's property, Lock Haven, caught fire on Thursday evening and was damaged to the extent of $500.

—Somebody is using hard words in reference to the Lock Haven Journal, and that newspaper returns the compliment to 'somobody" with interest.

—A Juniata county man run his little finger through a sausage machine and now the family are uneasy because they don't know which particular link contains the missing member.

—Burglars ruined the safe of Mr. John J. Strayer, Johnstown, on Wednesday night, the 6th, for the sake of 60 cents. It would have been money in Mr. Strayer's pocket to have left the safe open.

—A deep hole has been dug on the Spring street side of the Centre County Bank building which should be either filled up or fenced in before somebody injures themselves severely by falling into it.

—The receiver of the Lycoming Fire Insurance Company, J. A. Beeber, Esq., of Williamsport, has been directed to make a second distribution of ten per cent. to the creditors, payable in twenty days.

—The anticipated entertainment for the benefit of the organ fund of the Methodist church has been indefinitely postponed because of the illness of some of those who are expected to take part.

—Why didn't the new Canadian weather prophet, Wiggins, call attention to the "blizzard" which just ended and which was experienced in all parts of the country? Was it too insignificant for him to notice?

—Williamsport's Sunday newspaper, the Breakfast Table, recently appeared in a handsome new dress, with other new and attractive features. We are pleased to notice this evidence of prosperity in our lively contemporary.

—Twelve persons were received into full membership in the Methodist church on Sunday. The service of receiving the new members took place immediately after the Sunday school because of the inability of some of them to attend at either the morning or evening service.

—The domestic peace and quiet of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Williams was seriously disturbed on Saturday night by a band of very unmusical instruments which improvised a concert in front of their residence. We have no doubt the serenade was in honor of their marriage about two weeks ago.

—The pavements were exceedingly slippery Sunday and Monday, It was interesting to watch the different gaits of pedestrians as they passed over the glassy surface. Some persons have a vivid impression of what it means to be brought in forcible contact with the pavements.

—At the regular meeting of borough council Monday eve. the 4th, petitions were received for two lamps—one to stationed on the street leading to the Friends' graveyard and the other in the vicinity of the glass works. The proper committee was also empowered by council to make arrangements with the superintendent of the Bald Eagle Valley Railroad Company to supply the locomotives of the company with water.

A Genuine Winter Morning.

The people of this place experienced slight touches of winter's cruel blasts on several previous occasions this season—at one time the mercury marking as low as 11° above zero; but Friday morning beat that record by 9°, sinking as low as 2° above. The cold at Snow Shoe was far more intense, the thermometer registering 4° below zero. Without doubt, the fierce blasts of wind which prevailed that morning rendered people more sensitive to the cold. That the cold held on quite tenaciously is shown by the fact that at 7 o'clock a. m. the mercury had not—to use a slang phrase—"let up" in the least and still marked the same. There are lessons which the severe weather should teach us. It should incite us to deeds of kindness and charity. Perhaps three-fourths of the residents of Bellefonte are abundantly able to provide for themselves warm clothing, fuel and food; but there may be some who find it difficult to do so. The fact that there are so many people in Bellefonte so richly endowed with material wealth renders it all the more a disgrace that a single instance of real want should be permitted to exist within the boundaries of the borough. Those who are thus prepared to brave the wintry blasts are in duty bound by the commonest instincts of humanity—without taking the teachings of Christianity into account—to seek out such needy poor and administer relief in a way that will not wound the most sensitive spirits. The cultivated, rich and high-toned of our community should find it in their power to do this. They should have learned it in the teachings of the schools. For what purpose is the education and cultivation of all our powers and talents if it does not administer to our own satisfaction and refine the senses of humanity? There are some, we know, who are so gross and sensual that, although the schools polish for years, their natures never reflect any lustre; such persons are incapable of true education; some of their senses must forever remain dormant. Here is a study—the refinement of the senses—that a greater number should make an object of investigation Then they would be better prepared to be ministering spirits of love and light in what force of circumstances makes to some a dark and gloomy world.

An Alarm of Fire.

On Thursday night, at half-past 9 o'clock, the dread alarm of fire was sounded. Many persons, after going a few steps in quest of it, returned to their homes, imagining that it was a false alarm. The source from whence the alarm first proceeded was the elegant residence of Judge John H. Orvis, on Linn street, and was caused by the fire from the fire-place grate in the parlor communicating with the floor. The gentlemen who first reached the house immediately began the operation of extinguishing it. They tore up the carpet and used George Washington's little hatchet very effectively on the flames, at length getting them under control. No wonder the flames were easily subdued when the law and the gospel and the prince of grocers and lumber merchants lent their aid to that purpose. We suppose that Colonel D. H. Hastings marshaled the forces to the attack; Mr. H. Sechler doubtless spread salt around profusely; Rev. John Hewitt used the worldly weapon—the axe—,and Mr. John Ardell utilized his capacious form in preventing the stream of water from the firemen's hose entering the dwelling. Their combined efforts produced the desired effect, and although the fire companies were on hand their services were not required. Their cheerful alacrity in coming to the aid of those in distress on such a bitter cold night merits the highest commendation.

Death of Mrs. Elizabeth VanTries.

The death of the lady whose name is contained in the above title occurred on Sunday morning about 11 o'clock. She had been ill for a long time and continued to sink slowly until her death, on Sunday. On Saturday she was unable to take any nourishment. She was quite an aged lady, but we did not learn the exact number of years which mark her earthly pilgrimage.

The deceased was a granddaughter of Gen. James Potter, of Revolutionary fame. Her mother, Elizabeth C., was married to Hon. James Poe, of Antrim township, Franklin county. Their only daughter, Elizabeth, was married to Mr. Samuel VanTries. She was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church and a constant attendant on all the services when health would permit. The funeral was held yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Samuel VanTries, husband of the lady whose death is recorded above, is also seriously ill.

The Resurrection of the Body.

The Presbyterian congregation had the pleasure of listening to the Rev. J. F. Delong Sunday morning, their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Laurie, having exchanged pulpits with the former, and preached for the Reformed congregation.

Mr. Delong preached on "The resurrection of the body," his text being the 54th verse of the 15th chapter of 1st Corinthians.

In treating the above theme, which the Apostle Paul himself declares to be a "mystery," Mr. Delong not only showed ability as a Bible scholar, but was able to make comparatively plain some of the difficult points of this mysterious but interesting subject.

The character of the "spiritual" body into which the "mortal" body will be transformed—or at least some probable idea of what it will be—were very forcibly shown by an apt comparison of the different kingdoms in nature. Thus: in the mineral kingdom we see nothing but pure matter; in the vegetable kingdom some unseen influence is exerting its power; in the animal kingdom, matter is so far controlled by spirit, as to have locomotion, and in the human kingdom matter is so far spiritualized that it manifests its mysterious power by the glistening eye, and the flush of the cheek. If, then, the transformation be so marked where the power has been only partial, how infinitely more glorious will be the result, when the spiritualization is complete!

Mr. Delong always receives a warm welcome in the Presbyterian church.

Philipsburg Pickings.

For which we credit the Journal.

Mrs. Martha Hunter has returned from a six weeks' visit in Iowa.

Misses Nettie Hancock and Annie McGirk recently returned from a protracted visit among friends at Cape May, N. J.

Miss Mary Gray has succeeded Miss Bathurst as chief operator at the Telephone Exchange, the latter having recently resigned.

Fire was discovered in the basement of the stone building belonging to J. M. Hale & Co. of Front and Presqueisle streets on Monday morning, the 4th, but was extinguished before it had done much damage.

The stockholders of the Philipsburg Driving Park Association met in the Board of Trade room on Tuesday evening, the 5th, and elected the following officers: President, D. W. Holt; Vice President, J. N. Casanova; Secretary and Treasurer, Jno. A. Mull; Board of Directors (increased from five to seven) I. G. Lingle, C. A. Faulkner, Geo. W. McGaffey, Jno. A. Wolfe, Al. Jones, D. W. Holt and J. N. Casanova. An assessment of 35 per cent. was laid in order to wipe out the indebtedness of the association.

A War Document.

The following reminiscence of of war times was found by Captain George A. Bayard and handed to us. The Central Press alluded to was published by Mr. J. G. Kurtz. It is as follows:

CENTRAL PRESS EXTRA.
Bellefonte, June 15, 1863.

INVASION OF THE STATE BY THE REBELS.

CALL FOR FIFTY THOUSAND MEN.

Through the kindness of Mr. J. B. Antes, telegraph operator at this place, we have been furnished with the following news:

HARRISBURG, June 15.

Lee is moving in force on Penna He has defeated our forces at Winchester and Martinsburg, and part of his army is in Hagerstown, Md. The President has called for 50,000 men to serve for six months, if not sooner discharged, to be clothed and fed by us and to be accredited on the draft.

Unless our people respond to this call, a large part of the State will be laid waste by the rebels.

A. G. CURTIN.

All the telegraph lines in the State have been taken possession of by the the Government.

By private sources we learn that Hooker is falling back to Washington.

—The Williamsport Breakfast Table has lifted a great load from our shoulders. It says a young man can marry on $10 a week, and backs it up with facts. We've just been aching to hook on to some lovable female for the last six years but didn't think it safe to make it on less than $5,000 a year in this fast age; but, sakes alives, if the thing can be did on $12 a week, why longer remain in single harness? Now if our esteemed contemporary can recommend us to some fair maiden of about nineteen summers, with a voice like a lute, a smile like the sunshine and a poor appetite for ice cream we shall be prepared to open negotiations. Record of life up to date furnished if desired.

Practices that Should be Stopped.

We did not suppose that people residing on such a prominent thoroughfare as High street, between Spring and Allegheny streets, would be guilty of so objectionable a practice as to throw water on their pavements such a morning as that of last Saturday, but that is just what at least two families whose handsome stone mansions are witihn the boundaries named were guilty of doing that morning. The servants of aforesaid mansions did not scrub the pavements, but they did apply that cleansing process to the steps in front of the houses, allowing the water to splash on the pavements, which quickly congealed to ice and rendered the brick walks exceedingly slippery and dangerous. If that had occurred in the city the parties would have been subject to fine. The fact that High street is precipitous renders it the more dangerous. Please stop it.

Another practice to which we hasten to call attention is that in vogue at the Bellefonte Water Works. The "blow off" pipe from that establishment is in such a position as to cause the clouds of steam to pass directly across the walk. This congeals on the walk, rendering it slippery for quite a long distance. The pipe, we understand, could easily be directed towards one of the other four corners of the globe, and if the "powers that be" at that establishment will please take advantage of this suggestion they will receive the plaudits and escape the scathing denunciations of pedestrians.

Obituary.

The Muncy Luminary alludes as follows to the death of Mr. Adam Rankin, brother of our townsman, Mr. Joseph Alexander Rankin:

Death has found the shining mark he loves in the person of Mr. Adam Rankin, of Shamokin, Pa., and late of Muncy, who left this "vale of tears" for the "far better land" on Wednesday, November 29th, in the 82d year of his age. He came to Muncy from Centre county, Pa., and for years made his home in our midst. His piety and sterling worth making themselves known among his brethren of the Presbyterian Church of Muncy, he was elected an elder, which responsible office he filled in a most exemplary manner, as a safe adviser and devoted officer. In secular life he filled for years a magisterial office with that fidelity which was so marked a characteristic. It may thus be seen what a loss we, of this community, have sustained. In his family, in his church and in local life Mr. Rankin was ever the same kind and tender, wise and upright leader, associate and friend. Such a man cannot easily be spared, and while we all mourn his loss, his family and his Church are especially bereaved. Yet we cannot be selfish in our sorrow. He had long borne the burden and heat of the day, and tired nature called for rest. He had carried faithfully the armor and the sword of the Church militant and the time had come for his translation to the Church triumphant—and to depart and be with Christ was far better. Although so upright a man, Mr. Rankin deeply realized his need of Saviour; and he loved the house and worship of his Lord. His reward is in Heaven, in the hearing of the "well done, good and faithful servant," and Psalm XXVI presents his epitaph on earth. S.

Irregular Attendance at School.

An exchange says: "One of the greatest drawbacks to the success of our common school system is the irregular attendance of many of the pupils. In almost every school there are children who attend by fits and starts, who are in their place to-day and absent to-morrow. At the end of the term they are decidedly behind their fellows, and the responsibility is almost invariably put on the unfortunate teacher. Parents who permit their children to absent themselves from school upon the most trivial pretext are always the most severely critical in their attitude toward the teachers. They do not seem to remember that their children have only been in the school room semi-occasionally, or, if they do remember it, they esteem it as a matter of minor importance. Yet it is a fact that no child who is irregular in his attendance will make much progress at school. Parents ought to remember this truth and improve in this respect. Send your children every day and you will be agreeebly surprised at the result."

—One of the hotels at Boalsburg—the Union House—is presided over in a capable and efficient manner by Mr. Emanuel Wolf. He ought to understand the hotel business perfectly, as his father was proprietor of the same hotel, so long ago as 1830. He now conducts it in first-class style, rendering it exceedingly pleasant for all who remain there either for boarding or lodging. Many are the reminiscences which Mr. Wolf can tell concerning the history of the hotel; but we have only space to advise our readers to "put up" with him when they go to Boalsburg.

—Two ejectment cases occupied the attention of Court on Friday.

Simple Rules to Guard against Diphtheria.

It is particularly important that persons whose throats are tender or sore from any cause should avoid possible exposure to the contagion of diphtheria. Children under ten years of age are in much greater danger of taking the disease, and after they do take it of dying from it, than are grown persons. But adults are not exempt and mild cases in them may cause whole series of fatal attacks among children.

Numerous instances are recorded where the contagion of diphtheria has retained its virulence for weeks or months in cesspools, heaps of decaying vegetable matter, damp walls, etc., and been carried for long distances in clothing, in sewers, in waste pipes from stationary wash stands and in other conduits. Hence al sewer connections and other carriers of filth should be well ventilated and disinfected, and children particularly should not be allowed to breathe the air of any stationary cesspool or sewer into which discharges from patients sick with diphtheria have entered, nor to drink water or milk which has been exposed to such air.

Beware of any person who has a sore throat; do not kiss such a person or take his or her breath; do not drink from the same cup, blow the same whistle, nor put his pencil or pen in your mouth.

Do not wear or handle clothing which has been worn by a person during sickness or convalescence from diphtheria.

—Mr. William Spiller, (colored), better known by the sobriquet of "Major" Spiller, died Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the county jail, where he had for some time been kept, principally, we believe, because his mind was not very sound and it was considered the best place in which to confine him. He will be remembered as at one time a popular servant at the Brockerhoff House. He was nominated by the Republicans for High Constable a year ago, but was not elected. The many persons who have received favors at his hands when he was in the enjoyment of health and reason will remember him affectionately.

An Old Subject Revived.

It is indeed pleasant to hear even the faintest rumors regarding a resumption of operations at the car works, and therefore the rumor that that costly establishment will soon again be a scene of animated industry is received with especial favor. It is said that there is a party willing to begin the manufacture of cars as soon as an order can be secured. In view of the fact that there is a great demand for cars on all the railroads, we do not think there will be any difficulty in securing orders.

—The cold blast which swooped down upon us so suddenly on Thursday resulted in getting at least one man into a fix. We heard him remark in the barber shop Friday, by way of an apology for the accumulation of real estate on his hands and face, the water about his premises froze up so sudden that he was obliged to forego his weekly wash. If there are many men reduced to his condition by the cold wave it is to be hoped that a thaw will set in shortly.

—The revival services in the Ironworkers' building at Valentines' forge are resulting in rich spiritual blessings to those who attend. Twenty conversions have already been made and nineteen others are kneeling humbly at the mourners' bench awaiting the blessed peace which follows sins forgiven. "Go and sin no more."

—Early in December, says an exchange, is the time for marrying. The newly made husband can then stand his wife off for a Christmas present by telling her it took all the money to furnish the house. To try the same dodge the second year is apt to cause trouble.

—The junior editor of the Centre Democrat visited the postoffice on Friday morning without his overcoat. It is the first time for a month that he has gone so far minus that useful garment. Friday morning was too warm for such incumbrances, you know.

—Two letters are held in the Bellefonte postoffice for better direction. They are postmarked "Atwood." One is addressed "Mr. William Gates, Mark Burns P. O., Centre county, Pa.," and the other "Mr. Andrew Curtin, Mark Burns P. O., Centre county, Pa."

—It is a mistaken idea that all the turkeys were killed for Thanksgiving. —Williamsport Sun and Banner. We should say that it is. The idea of killing a turkey or any other living thing for giving thanks is too barberous to be entertained for a moment.

—Has the boat club been transformed into a skating association yet?
